Oats, peas, beans and barley locally grown could be coming to Camp Hill this spring.

Representing about 12 farmers, Martha Roberts of Pretty Meadow Farm in Newport on Jan. 11 presented to Camp Hill Borough Council a concept for a locally grown, produced and raised farmers market.

The proposed outdoor market would be held at the borough building on Thursday afternoons from Memorial Day through Thanksgiving. Products would come from farms and producers within a 50-mile radius of Camp Hill.

According to Roberts, the day was selected so as not to compete with other farmers markets in the area.

A number of Camp Hill residents spoke in favor of the market. Borough Council Vice President Don Edwards said numerous emails supporting the market had been received.

WHAT'S NEXT? The borough's health and safety committee is expected to review the concept, and the planning and the zoning committee is expected to review the current zoning for a farmers market.

Council member Carl Schultz said that he thought the market was a good idea, provided zoning and safety issues could be ironed out.
